From the LONDON EVENING POST.

AMONG the various methods practiſed by this country, in the courſe of the late war, none have been more ſteadily purſued, than falſe repreſentations with reſpect to our own tranſactions in America, and the diſpoſition and ſituation of the Americans. Our political ſcribblers have not been deficient in their exertions towards promoting an irreconcileable hatred between both countries; for which purpoſes theſe warriors of the quill have, throughout the war, been as active in their ſeveral departments as our moſt intrepid Admirals or Generals. In the preliminaries, I think hoſtilities ought to have ceaſed among theſe literary corps, as among the military. For, inſtead of a cordiality taking place between theſe parties, they ſeem rather diſpoſed to widen the breach, and to encreaſe the enmity which has too long prevailed between G. Britain and America. However, the Americans have little to fear from theſe plume gentry. As they have ſo long deceived this nation throughout the war, their lucubrations are conſidered only as whims of a diſappointed party. The many penſioned gentry which are feeding on this nation cannot, in gratitude, do leſs than lay ſomething for a livelihood; and nothing can be thought more agreeable by them than vilifying the Americans, and caſting every ſevere reflection on a country which has ſpurned them from their former reſidence. Let any Briton impartially look over our papers publiſhed throughout this war, he will ſcarcely find a paragraph reſpecting the American war but what was a fabricated ſtory. All our fancied expectations, calculated to buoy up our ſpirits, have moſt commonly become the "baſeleſs fabric of a viſion" Throughout the war, how have we been duped by almoſt every paragraph. We have been kept in the greateſt ignorance, and never knew our real ſituation, till it became too intereſting to be any longer concealed. Even in our worſt misfortunes, ſome fancied whim would ſtart from the brain of ſome hireling to keep up the deception, and make us perſiſt in our meaſures, tho' evidently contrary to every proſpect of ſucceſs. What great expectations have been formed, throughout the different periods of the war, from the expected diſunion of the States---the diſbanding of the American army---their want of reſources---their paper currency, &c. &c. but, far from anſwering our ſanguine expectations, not one benefit has ariſen to ourſelves, nor one ill conſequence attended the Americans, from all theſe bugbears of our diſtempered brains. The Americans have ever aroſe ſuperior to all theſe fancied misfortunes, and ought to have taught us, long ſince, the futility of our imaginary hopes.

Since peace is concluded, we cannot but think it an inſult on our underſtandings ſtill to endeavour to deceive this country by the many falſities which are daily publiſhed. We are now fed up with the idea that the Americans are in a ſtate of diſunion! That their independence will ſoon become a "ſound, and nothing elſe!" That their diſputes with Congreſs will finally deſtroy their confederation! And that then, like ſheep without a ſhepherd, they will be glad to return to the protection of this country; that their finances are in a miſerable ſituation; that their taxes are ſo exceſſive, as to occaſion anarchy and confuſion. In ſhort, that their independence, now they have acquired it, has already become too burthenſome for them to ſupport. All theſe pleaſing proſpects are now held out by our pen, ink and paper gentry; and they fooliſhly imagine the people of England ſtill retain their former folly of believing theſe abſurdities. What an abuſe on this nation, to have ſuch vain publications! We muſt ever continue the ridicule of the world, to ſoothe ourſelves at this time of day with ſuch deceptions; ſtill to hold up the idea, that the American independence is tottering from its baſis, when this country has ſo fully experienced the fortitude and perſeverance of the Americans in its ſupport. Can we be ſo blinded, as to fancy America will now reſign that independence, which has coſt them ſo much blood and treaſure? Why do we ſuppoſe their independence is of leſs value now, than when they were clad in arms to ſupport it? No, they will ever retain the glorious acquiſition; and, like men worthy of the bleſſing, they will continue in thoſe uniform meaſures which they purſued in acquiring it.

Let us only examine upon what ſlender foundation the vaſt expectations of our daily writers are ſupported:

The firſt is, the diſunion of the States. Can any ſuppoſition be more abſurd? What greater cauſe have we to expect they will become diſunited now, than when they firſt began their oppoſition to this country? A diſunion then might have been expected, when ſo many intereſts were to be conſulted; when the cauſe was not ſo univerſal; when Britain was conſidered as a parent State; when all their meaſures were to be planned, and purſued on a new footing; when their fears were alarmed as to the conſequences of a war; unallied with any foreign power; an army to raiſe, when an army of Britons were in the field to encounter; at this time do we find them diſunited? No, we behold them, in theſe alarming circumſtances, knit together like a band of brothers, and becoming formidable in their union. How idle, therefore, to ſay, in any circumſtances, a diſunion will cauſe their ruin?

The ſecond is, their diſputes with Congreſs! This is almoſt too trifling to need a ſerious confutation. Can any nation exhibit a ſtronger proof of unlimited confidence placed in a ſovereignty, than the Americans have this war reſigned into the hands of Congreſs! Throughout the war, the power of Congreſs has never been diſputed: They have willingly given into their hands all the power which it was neceſſary they ſhould at that time exerciſe. No diſunion throughout the war has taken place between Congreſs and the ſeveral States. A coalition of ſentiment has ever been prevalent; their recommendations have ever been attended to, as far as the ſituation of the ſeveral States would admit; and if at any time their recommendations were not adopted, it appears their refuſal did not ariſe from any diſaffection, but their inability at that particular time to comply with the requiſition. A confidence has ever been placed in Congreſs in all their foreign and domeſtic negociations, in as general a manner as is conceivable, in ſo extenſive a confederation. Many particulars might be mentioned, to ſhew wherein the moſt perfect union has been continued, even in matters the moſt likely to produce anarchy and diſorder. From what we have hitherto experienced, we ought to judge it is the faireſt and moſt eligible method; therefore, from what has hitherto appeared reſpecting Congreſs and the States, we have no reaſon to ſuppoſe a diſunion will take place in any matters eſſential to the ſupport of their independence.

With reſpect to ſome late altercations which has ſet the whole ſcribbling crew in motion, they appear to be of a mere temporary nature; and our making ſuch pompous parade about them, only ſerves to convince the world of our venom and chagrin. It ſeems Congreſs have removed from Philadelphia to Princeton; and pray what then? Do they not ſit in Princeton in their official capacity? If we had heard that the States had voted Congreſs a uſeleſs body and had annihilated them, there might be ſome reaſon for our exultation; but their removing from one place to another, merely as a convenience, and there exerciſing their judicial authority, is too trifling a circumſtance for this nation to expect any advantage from; as Congreſs now as fully retain all their authority and power at Princeton as they did at Philadelphia, where, then, is our great cauſe to glory?

Great expectations are formed from the ſituation of their finances. No country has greater reſources within themſelves than America; but can we expect a young country, having the formidable power of Britain to engage with ſhould be able to arrange their whole military department and at the ſame time be in a ſituation to regulate their finances in ſuch order, as to eſtabliſh a regular fund for the diſcharge of all debts contracted in the war. It is the wonder of the world they have accompliſhed thus far. The debt which they have contracted can in a very little time be fully diſcharged, by bringing forth a very ſmall proportion of their numberleſs reſources. How ignorant muſt this country be reſpecting the abilities of America, if we ſuppoſe the American debt can in the leaſt manner embarraſs them in the payment. A debt of a few millions can be quickly wiped off by a young, flouriſhing, enterprizing country. If that country had by this war contracted a debt in addition to one they before groaned under, we might indulge the idea that their reſources were not adequate to the purpoſes of diſcharging their arrears; but the late war debt is their only debt, and they have every thing untouched among themſelves to diſcharge it. Their encreaſe of trade with all nations will ſoon promote a national fund, by the duties ariſing from the various ſources of trade. The American debt is rather an advantage to their growth as a young nation; it will make them attentive to their finances, and force them to explore reſources, which otherwiſe might be wholly unknown; it will encourage induſtry, frugality and attention, virtues moſt eſſential to the proſperity of a young nation. From the danger of their public debt, we cannot therefore expect a diſſolution of their independence; it rather becomes a cement for its ſtability; their encreaſe of trade, their produce and manufactures, will ever keep that country above the danger of bankruptcy.

The late recommendation to the ſeveral States, reſpecting their furniſhing Congreſs with a fund for the diſcharge of the public debt, is of a very important nature; we in England poſitively declare the States will not comply with the requiſition, and then haſtily make up our judgment, that the confederation muſt conſequently be diſſolved. The recommendation, it is true, is not yet complied with, but ſo far from drawing the general conſequences it eſtabliſhes me in the ſentiment of their permanent union; nothing is laſting that is haſtily done; their long debates on the proper meaſures, and their not complying in a hurry, convinces me that all their actions are the effects of cool deliberation. It appears the ſenſe of all the States, that ſome meaſures muſt be adopted to put Congreſs in a ſituation to diſcharge their public contracts; but the meaſures for this purpoſe cannot, nor ought not, by a free people, to be done haſtily. We herein ſee the ſpirit of a free people, by their debates on money inſtitutions uncontrouled; they debate on the utility of the meaſure, and the moſt eligible method for its execution: The wiſdom of a free government is hereby conſpicuous; their deliberations give a permanency to their doings, and when their meaſures are once adopted, they become laſting and concluſive.

Money ſupplies are reckoned a moſt intereſting tranſaction in a nation, and no greater ſecurity is evident, than when a people grant their ſupplies with caution and deliberation. Haſty grants always portend a diſſolution; our concluſions therefore from their not yet complying with the requiſition of Congreſs muſt be erroneous, and we cannot but be convinced that their long debates will finally produce a fixed and adequate eſtabliſhment.

Upon the whole, we have hitherto been kept in ſuch ignorance reſpecting the American war, and the preſent ſituation of that country, that I have not wondered at the many paragraphs which are daily publiſhed; but I hope in future we ſhall open our eyes, and no longer become the dupes of folly and deception.

LUCIUS.

PHILADELPHIA, November 26.

The following letter and addreſs were preſented to his Excellency General Waſhington, on the 15th inſtant.

SIR, Weſt-Point, Nov. 15, 1783.

THE officers of the part of the army who agreed on the incloſed addreſs, having committed to us the honor of preſenting it, with great pleaſure we now offer to your Excellency this teſtimony of their affectionate attachment and reſpect. We have the honor to be, with perfect conſideration, Sir, your Excellency's moſt obedient and moſt humble ſervants,

A. M'DOUGALL, Major General,
H. KNOX, Major General,
T. PICKERING, Q. M. General.

To his Excellency General Waſhington, Commander in Chief of the Armies of the United States of America.

WE, the officers of the part of the army remaining on the Banks of the Hudſon, have received your Excellency's ſerious and farewel addreſs to the armies of the United States. We beg your acceptance of our unfeigned thanks for the communication, and your affectionate aſſurances of inviolable attachment and friendſhip. If your attempts to enſure to the armies the juſt, the promiſed rewards of their long, ſevere and dangerous ſervices, have failed of ſucceſs, we believe it has ariſen from cauſes not in your Excellency's power to controul. With extreme regret do we reflect on the occaſion which called for ſuch endeavours. But while we thank your Excellency for theſe exertions in favor of the troops you have ſo ſucceſsfully commanded, we pray it may be believed, that in this ſentiment our own particular intereſts have but a ſecondary place; and that even the ultimate ingratitude of the people (were that poſſible) would not ſhake the patriotiſm of thoſe who ſuffer by it. Still, with pleaſing wonder and with grateful joy, ſhall we contemplate the glorious concluſion of our labours. To that merit in the revolution, which, under the auſpices of Heaven, the armies have diſplayed, poſterity will do juſtice; and the ſons will bluſh whoſe fathers were their foes. Moſt gladly would we caſt a veil over every act which ſullies the reputation of our country—never ſhould the page of hiſtory be ſtained with its diſhonor—even from our memories ſhould the idea be eraſed. We lament the oppoſition to thoſe ſalutary meaſures which the wiſdom of the Union has planned: meaſures which alone can recover and fix on a permanent baſis the credit of the States; meaſures which are eſſential to the juſtice, the honor and intereſt of the nation. While ſhe was giving the nobleſt proofs of magnanimity, with conſcious pride we ſaw her growing fame; and, regardleſs of preſent ſufferings, we looked forward to the end of our toils and dangers, to brighter ſcenes in proſpect. There we beheld the genius of our country dignified by ſovereignty and independence, ſupported by juſtice, and adorned with every liberal virtue. There we ſaw patient huſbandry fearleſs extend her cultured fields, and animated commerce ſpread her ſails to every wind. There we beheld fair ſcience lift her head, with all the arts attending in her train. There, bleſt with freedom, we ſaw the human mind expand; and throwing aſide the reſtraints which confined it to the narrow bounds of COUNTRY, it embraced the WORLD. Such were our fond hopes, and with ſuch delightful proſpects did they preſent us. Nor are we diſappointed. Thoſe animating PROSPECTS are now changed and changing to REALITIES; and actively to have contributed to their production is our pride, our glory. But JUSTICE alone can give them ſtability. In that JUSTICE we ſtill believe. Still we hope that the prejudices of the miſinformed will be removed, and the arts of falſe and ſelfiſh popularity, addreſſed to the feelings of avarice, defeated: For in the worſt event, the world, we hope, will make the juſt diſtinction. We truſt the diſingenuouſneſs of a few will not ſully the reputation, the honor and dignity of the great and reſpectable majority of the States.

We are happy in the opportunity juſt preſented of congratulating your Excellency on the certain concluſion of the DEFINITIVE TREATY OF PEACE. Relieved at length from long ſuſpenſe, our warmeſt wiſh is to return to the boſom of our country, to reſume the character of citizens; and it will be our higheſt ambition to become uſeful ones. To your Excellency this great event muſt be peculiarly pleaſing; for while at the head of her armies, urged by patriot virtues and magnanimity, you perſevered, under the preſſure of every poſſible difficulty and diſappointment, in the purſuit of the great objects of the war—the freedom and ſafety of your country—your heart panted for the tranquil enjoyments of peace. We cordially rejoice with you that the period of indulging them has arrived ſo ſoon. In contemplating the bleſſings of liberty and independence, the rich price of eight years hardy adventure, paſt ſufferings will be forgotten; or if remembered, the recollection will ſerve to heighten the reliſh of preſent happineſs. We ſincerely pray GOD this happineſs may long be yours; and that when you quit the ſtage of human life, you may receive from the UNERRING JUDGE the rewards of valor exerted to ſave the oppreſſed—of patriotiſm and diſintereſted virtue.

GARRISON ORDERS,

Weſt Point, Nov. 16, 1783.

THE Definitive Treaty being concluded, and the city of New York to be evacuated on the 22d inſtant, his Excellency the Commander in Chief propoſes to celebrate the peace at that place, on Monday, the 1ſt day of December next, by a diſplay of the fire-works and illuminations which were intended to be exhibited at this poſt, or ſuch of them as have not been injured by time, and can be tranſported. JOHN DOUGHTY, Fort Major.

On Saturday laſt, John Thaxter, Eſq; private Secretary to the Honorable Mr. Adams, arrived here from l'Orient, via New-York, where he was landed from on board the French Pacquet, the Courier de l'Europe, which left France on the 26th of September. This gentleman comes with official diſpatches to Congreſs from their Miniſters in Europe, and brings the Definitive Treaty of Peace between Great-Britain and America, which will not be publiſhed until it has been formally laid before the United States in Congreſs aſſembled.---However, we can aſſure our readers that the articles which compoſe this treaty are preciſely the ſame as thoſe comprizing the proviſional articles, but with a ſmall difference in the preamble and concluſion.---It was ſigned at Paris on the 3d of September laſt.

The Treaty of Commerce was not concluded when the Pacquet left France.

We have it from a French gentleman of diſtinction, that the ſhip America, of 74 guns (preſented by Congreſs to our good ally, the King of France) arrived at Breſt, from Portſmouth, New-Hampſhire, after a fine paſſage of 22 days. She is an excellent ſhip, a fine ſailer, and is greatly admired by the naval officers at Breſt.

The following gentlemen are choſen officers of the Society of the Cincinnati for the ſtate of Virginia:

Major-General Gates, Preſident.
Brigadier General Muhlenberg, Vice Preſident.
Lieut. Col. Oliver Towles, Secretary.
Lieut. Col. Edward Carrington, Treaſurer.

Delegates to the general meeting:

Brigadier-General Weedon, Colonels Wood, Heth, Lee, and Lieutenant Colonel Hopkins.

The ſchooner Eſther, Captain Towers, is arrived at Charles-Town, after a paſſage of 22 days, having been diſmaſted in a gale of wind ſoon after leaving our Capes. The Betſey, Swinburn, from Virginia, is alſo arrived at Charles-Town, having been 21 days at ſea, and received conſiderable damages, being thrown on her beam ends, and obliged to cut away her maſts.

Sir Guy Carleton, with the remains of his Britiſh legions, will retire to Long Iſland and Staten-Iſland, until the arrival of another diviſion of tranſports, which is momently expected from Europe.

NEW-JERSEY,

HOUSE of ASSEMBLY, November 14, 1783.

The ADDRESS to the Governor, Council and Assembly of the state of New-Jersey, by CASPAR VOGHT and Company, of Hamburgh, respecting trade, with a specification of goods, &c. were read; whereupon Ordered, That the Clerk be directed to furnish the Printer of the New-Jersey Journal, as also the Printers of the Pennsylvania Gazette, with a copy thereof, and that they be requested to publish the same.

Extract from the Minutes,
MASKELL EWING, jun. Clerk.

To his Excellency the Governor, and the Honorable Members of Assembly of the State of New-Jersey, in Council assembled.

GENTLEMEN,

PERSUADED that in your well known great goodness, you will condescend to excuse our presuming to address you in a Legislative body, we beg leave, through your Honorable Assembly, to assure the inhabitants of your state, that the deserved freedom and independence of North-America, so generally desired, and on the point of being universally acknowledged, will immensely contribute to the happiness of all Europe, as well as theirs; change the system of every merchant established before this expected glorious revolution; and open the best of prospects to both sides the Atlantic; prospects that assure multiplied and reciprocal advantages.

Excited more by a patriotic zeal, than self-interest, we also beg leave, Gentlemen, to remind you of the superior advantages peculiar to Germany; it being in the opinion of very many great and learned men, who have no further interest in the revolutions of trade, than a sincere wish for the good of the whole, of all places in Europe, that, which best promises mutual benefits, from the conformity of its climate with yours; having all the manufactures proper for your trade, particularly those of the first necessity.

Hamburgh, a neutral, free and imperial city, happily situated upon the river Elbe, about eighty English miles from the sea, is considered as the key to all Germany, and the general magazine of all the northern productions. The harbour is continually full of ships, from almost every nation, and so very safe, deep and commodious, that the greatest can anchor close to the quays. It is also esteemed one of the richest and most flourishing cities of Europe; there being none which have such an universal trade in the products of America and both the Indies; nor so well stored with all the manufactures indispensably necessary to the North-Americans, who were formerly obliged to receive them on very unprofitable terms from England. In this town, therefore, the American merchants can be certain of meeting the best market, both for buying and selling.

We take the liberty, Gentlemen, to offer you herewith, a list of all the goods manufactured in Germany; as well as of those we get at the first hand from Russia, Sweden and Denmark; which here in Hamburgh we are able to sell as cheap, and often cheaper, than the merchants of those countries themselves.

Mr. Peter Penet, Agent for Virginia, and partner of the late Mr. Emanuel Pliarne, during his stay in Hamburgh, informed us of all the merchandize proper for your continent; and having in his travels through Germany seen its different manufactures, and observed their quality and moderate prices, he advised us to send somebody over to America, with samples of those proper for the American market, and which the English formerly bought of us to send there.

It is in the before mentioned city of Hamburgh, that for a long series of years, from father to son, our house has carried on a pretty extensive trade.

Encouraged by your known goodness, the advice of Mr. Penet, and the credit and experience our so long established trade has procured us, we hereby humbly sollicit the honor of your commands, for all such of the described articles you may think necessary to purchase. We will make it our principal study to serve you with the strictest probity, so as to deserve a continuance of your favors and confidence.

We propose, Gentlemen, sending directly an able and intelligent person to deliver you the samples, &c. and to receive your orders, in case you should please to grant us any.

We have the honor to be,
Gentlemen, with the greatest reverence and respect,
Your most devoted, and most obedient humble servants.
CASPAR VOGHT, and Co.

Hamburgh, the 20*th December*, 1782.

TO THE PUBLIC,

DR. BLAIR's character in the literary world is too well known to require any thing to be said of it. His Sermons, some time ago published, have, for elegance of composition and beauty of style, been universally admired: And the Lectures now offered to the Public, have been delivered by him in the University of Edinburgh for many years past to a very respectable and crouded attendance. The importance of their subjects to the Gentleman and the Scholar, must be at once perceived upon glancing over their Contents; and the knowledge, ability, and taste, displayed in their execution, have been acknowledged and admired by the first literary characters. This work has been very lately published in London, and will be sold here for about one half of the price of the London impression.

A few Copies will be printed on an ordinary paper, for the accommodation of Youth, and at a lower price.

Dr. HILL's American Balsam.

A FRESH quantity is now again prepared in the best perfection, and sold in Philadelphia, by Mr. William Poyntell, at his Store, three doors below Market-street, in Second-street, and directly opposite the Friend's meeting-house gate; also by Mr. George Reinhold, in Market-street, next door to the Black-Bear; by Mr. Steiner, at the German Printing-Office, in Race-street; at Germantown, by Mr. Justus Fox; and by the subscriber, at his place, in Kingsess, near Gray's Ferry. Price Six Shillings and Six-pence per bottle, and by the dozen, Six Shillings a bottle.

It is now many years since this balsam has been well known to be a most effectual and infallible medicine for colds, coughs and asthmas; that it gives great relief in the gravel, rheumatism, consumption, cholic; that it is a most excellent cure in the hooping cough, and in most of the sicknesses of children, and for many other diseases, as may be seen in the printed direction, in English and German, with each bottle; in old diseases of long standing, it will be necessary to continue the use of this healing balsam for a reasonable time, by more than one single bottle, and then they may expect relief from this, as thousands of people can testify, who have tried other things without success.

If any balsam under this name should be sold at any other place not named in my advertisement, the public may be assured it is not Dr. Hill's Balsam, but counterfeit, because no other person in America is able to prepare the genuine balsam, for want of the principal ingredients of which Dr. Hill's American Balsam is composed. § WILLIAM YOUNG, Botanist.

TO BE LETT,

And may be entered on in two weeks,

THAT new built and well constructed house, for a Tavern and Ferry, together with the boats, on the banks of Delaware, and on the great road leading from Philadelphia to New-York, a mile and an half above Bristol, with or without about 60 acres of arable land; the ferry is convenient for travellers to Perth-Amboy, Monmouth, and great part of the Jerseys, especially the city of Burlington, as there is a road and bridge lately erected and compleated over the creek next to the city. For further particulars, enquire of William Beaven, in Second-street, between Market and Chesnut-streets, or of the subscriber, near the premises. CHRISTIAN MINNICK.

N. B. None need apply but such as can be well recommended and capable of keeping a good house of entertainment. Also a good plantation to be lett, enquire as above. Oct. 29.

CAME to the plantation of the subscriber, living in Bristol township, Bucks county, a red brown Heifer, about two years old, with a crop in each ear. The owner is desired to pay charges, and take her away. CHRISTIAN MINNICK. ¶

TO BE SOLD,

A HOUSE, GRANARIES and WHARFF, in Water-street, a few doors below Chesnut-street, the Lot is 20 or 22 feet front, including part of an 8 feet Alley, sufficient for any waggon to pass. The stand speaks for itself, as there is few or none to exceed it for business. For further particulars, enquire of the Printers.

TO BE SOLD,

By the SUBSCRIBER, living on the premises,

A VALUABLE PLANTATION, lying in Bristol township, Bucks county, within one mile of Bristol borough, and half a mile from the river Delaware, containing 60 acres of very good land, ten of which is rich bottom meadow, and 20 acres very good woodland, the remainder good arable land; there is on the premises a good stone house, with three rooms on a floor, a good kitchen and cellar under the house, a good barn, milch-house, and other out-houses; likewise two apple orchards of the best grafted fruit, with a variety of other fruit trees of the best kind. For further particulars, enquire of Everard Boulton, in Front street, Philadelphia, between Market and Arch-streets, or the subscriber, on the premises.

¶ GEORGE WELSH.

Red-Lion Hundred, New-Castle county, Oct. 4, 1783.

WAEREAS SUSANNA HOWEL, alias DAVIS, hath, in a clandestine manner carried off the goods and effects of the subscriber, and has left his house, and refuses to live with him any longer: These are therefore to forewarn all persons not to trust her on my account, as I am determined to pay no debts of her contracting after the above date.

§ ENOS HOWEL.

THIS is to forewarn all persons that I JAMES CRISWELL, of Oxford township, Chester county, have purchased a tract of LAND of JAMES M'GOLDRICK, of Fort-Pitt, and have given him three BONDS, consisting of 100l. each; the first hundred pounds payable in December, 1783, and the next payment of 100l. in September, 1784, the next payment in September, 1785: As I have seen the land, and it being far from the description that said James M'Goldrick sold it to me for; I therefore forewarn and discharge any person or persons from receiving or taking an assignment on said bonds, as I will never pay any of them unless compelled by law.

Sept. 1, 1783. † JAMES CRISWELL.

N. B. The above Bonds were all dated in August, 1783.
